

A detailed black and white line drawing of a forest landscape. In the foreground, a stream flows from the left towards the center, with several large, flat rocks protruding from the water. The water is depicted with simple horizontal lines. The banks of the stream are covered with grass and small plants. In the background, a dense forest of tall, slender trees with full, rounded canopies rises up. The trees are drawn with vertical lines for trunks and clusters of small circles for leaves. The overall scene is peaceful and naturalistic.
